Re: Diverse Programming

I am writing in response to your letter to Rob Marcus and Brian Roberts. At the outset, let me say that we appreciate and share the concerns expressed by all of you. It is critical that diverse voices continue to have access to the markets they seek to serve. And we appreciate your acknowledgment of the significant commitments Comcast and Time Warner Cable have made to the carriage of diverse programming. As we have discussed with many of you over the past few years, our commitment to independent and diverse voices remains best in class in the industry, which is one of the reasons why our transaction with Time Warner Cable will be of significant benefit to the Hispanic community.

At Comcast, we are strong supporters of independent content, including channels owned by minorities. We carry 160 independent networks aimed at the diversity of audiences we serve across the country. We agree that carrying independent and minority-owned programming is the right thing to do for our customers and our company.

And that's exactly what we already do with programming aimed at and owned by Hispanics. We distribute more than 60 Latino networks in both Spanish and English. We offer the greatest programming choices in linear, digital, and on-demand platforms. We launched two new independent networks (El Rey and Baby First Americas) with majority Latino ownership and Latino management – launches that would not have occurred without our distribution commitments.

We also have launched the Xfinity Latino Entertainment Channel (the first-of-its-kind interactive channel that promotes curated, Latino-relevant content, and features “how-to” and “did you know” videos designed to improve the customer experience with our products and services), the celebrated Xfinity Freeview Latino event (a two week all-access pass to thousands of hours of the best Latino programming on Xfinity On Demand – and this year's edition will feature even more Latino programming), and our Xfinity Latino website (Xfinity.com/Latino), which features almost 9,000 choices and 2,500 hours of movies and shows online free to Xfinity Latino customers. We are also very proud of our recent efforts around the World Cup (including live broadcasts and On Demand carriage of every World Cup game in Spanish).

We are similarly proud of our commitment to Latino voices at NBCUniversal. Emmy Award-winning journalist and Telemundo anchor José Díaz-Balart has joined MSNBC's weekday line-up, anchoring MSNBC's 10 a.m. hour live from Miami, Florida. And the new NBCNews.com features a new vertical focused on original reporting and analysis relevant to the Latino community (www.nbcnews.com/news/latino), benefiting our Latino news coverage with greater exposure to the broader NBCNews.com audience and the more significant promotion of the NBCNews.com site. We've continued to invest in high quality programming for Telemundo, including securing the exclusive Spanish language rights to the next two World Cups.

Our commitment to the Hispanic community is also reflected in our significant diversity record and accomplishments in the supplier diversity, workforce diversity, and community investment spaces. These industry-leading diversity practices, developed and executed with the help of our Joint Diversity Advisory Council, will also be extended throughout the entire Time Warner Cable footprint.

Since 2011, Comcast has expanded the total distribution of seven Hispanic programming networks by more than 14 million subscribers. This exceeds by more than 40 percent our commitment in the NBCUniversal transaction to expand carriage of three Hispanic networks by 10 million subscribers.

Comcast has had an extraordinary, long-standing commitment to Hispanic programming – we believe the best in the industry -- and we look forward to continuing to work with all of you to pursue these goals. Through the transaction with Time Warner Cable, we are committed to bringing high-quality Hispanic content to millions of additional Americans. My only caveat is that the importance of independent and Hispanic programming, which we are excelling at delivering, should not be confused by parochial business interests seeking more money and distribution for themselves.

Sincerely,

/s/ David L. Cohen

Executive Vice President
